Anti-Hating Tips

A Compendium of Activities for Enjoying the Romance of Loneliness.

Explore your town in new ways. Bring supplies such as snacks, books, journal, or a mug of wine. Bake yourself some cookies at odd hours of the night. Drink too much coffee and explore your local library. Try getting somewhere by using only alleys. Draw wallet-sized portraits of your ideal boys. Get dressed up and go to a nice restaurant. Write love-letters to anonymous boys and post them on a bulletin board. Write really awful poetry. Re-read your favorite childhood book. Break something sentimental and glue it back together. Have a picnic in your bed. Ride the bus all day. Pick flowers for yourself. Eat well.

I guess my point is that if this bothers you enough to not speak to me again, just be glad it happened now.

I feel really crappy, like I've led you on didn't even get to see you before I left town.

Do you totally hate me? You should, I'm a bad person.
But if you don't, let's still go see that John Waters movie soon.

I am so sorry I haven't written in days.

I'm alternately taking turns trying to spare you pain and be honest.

It probably does you no good to hear that I really wish this could work out, but I really don't think it could. It's the old gay conundrum: we're both bottoms!

I feel that you take what we have going a lot more seriously than I do.

I need friends more than I need boyfriends.

(that's what he thinks!)
