is change

After falling in love with
newsletter editing
following a 20+ year love
with everything
hodge-podged and handmade - I've decided to create
my own zine.

My Scatter-brained self could have a grand time in these pages,
and I got nothing but positive reinforcement with the proposal.

So here it goes!

Perspective changes reality

Who am I?

What do I not see
or say because I am privileged?

Do I have the right to explain cultural heritage, hardships and oppression of groups of people where I don't belong?

How does my privilege and status reflect on my message
and how does it only add to the oppression when I voice out?

& Tricks With a "bullet" vibrator

Shh! (keeping it quiet)

Usually, what makes the most racket are the batteries rattling inside the chamber. try wrapping a toilet tissue thinly around each one to cushion.

G" rated

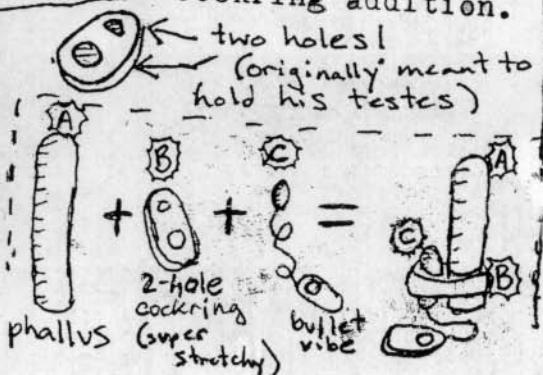

① Slip a vibe in each hand to do a great massage. ② Slide one into a scarf and wrap it around your neck for a de-it-yourself stress headache buster or those back of the neck/head pains.

Piece it together!

Either with a boy or with a toy, you can make your favorite phallus tickle your sweet spot with this cockring addition.

REMEMBER!!!

- * You know your body better than anyone.
- * Never insert the bullet- electric shock is NOT sexy.
- * Use a toy cleaner or the toy will cause infections.

SEXUAL POLITICS OF MEAT

I've been reading through an awesome book - The Sexual Politics of Meat: a feminist vegetarian theory. Here's a few interesting points from the text:

we are desensitized of the violence embedded in meat and the violence against women due to a conditioning of our language.

Meat is gendered and raced. Men need meat to be masculine. People of value, like the "head" of the household and the white get the valued parts of meals, leaving the scraps for anyone left over.

Great read- not a bathroom reader- but very enlightening

LESSON #1

Spreading the news on injustice
(a Sarah Leonard dedication)

First - talk loudly about what's going on and your frustrations (this will either hit a network of people who are organizing already, or will be the begin point of a grassroots campaign)

Fuel each other's passion & energy and use multiple tactics to both make change and spread awareness. This will put pressure on decision makers and recruit.
